The press has consistently praised the show, listing the tour among their must-see events. Rolling Stone claims the show as "one mega-show," and noting, "... the fine people behind the Lost 80's Live tour have learned, there is incredible strength in numbers. Every year, they throw together a bill stacked with Eighties bands and suddenly groups ... find themselves playing venues like the Greek Theater." And Consequence of Sound praising, "Lost 80's Live gets real with those fans by giving them exactly what they want. For years, they've been offering stacked lineups, filled with their favorite one-hit, two hit, three hit wonders, who all can be found on Spotify playlists dubbed "Super '80'S Playlist" or "Stranger things – 80's Songs." It's a win-win for the acts, too, as they're playing bigger and better venues."
